Judah's Captivity

2 Kings 23:29-37; 24:1-20; 25:1-11

Teacher Background

Towards the end of the kingdom of Judah Egypt dominated its affairs. Pharaoh Necho took king Jehoahaz prisoner, put his brother Eliakim (Jehoiakim) on the throne, and taxed Judah. Then Babylon made Judah its vassal. Eliakim rebelled, but Judah could not defend itself and Babylon took over. Nebuchadnezzar captured Jerusalem. He took the king, the skilled workers, and Judah's treasures to Babylon, and appointed Zedekiah king. After that, he burned the temple and the palace and took everything of value. Then he appointed Gedeliah to govern. However, the people killed him, after which the remaining people fled to Egypt.

Babylon brought about the end of the Israelitish church. By then, Judah was evil and full of falsities. Yet people were still given the opportunity to remain loyal to the Lord. During the 600 years between the Babylonian captivity and the Lord's birth on earth the Jewish church took on new forms. Rabbis or teachers reintroduced sacred rites and taught the Word. Defining the Jewish religion helped to preserve the Word.

Focus Points

- As Josiah's sons took the throne, Babylon took over Judah.
- As Babylon took Judah into captivity, people rebelled against Nebuchadnezzar.
- As the Church neared its end, Jerusalem was destroyed.

• Readings from the Writings

“When the sons of Israel wholly departed from the statutes which were representative of the spiritual things of the church ... they were all given into the hands of the king of Assyria... The same thing happened to the Jews. When they had adulterated and profaned all the statutes, judgments, and laws that represented good and truth of faith ... their church thus became Babylon, then not only their kings and princes and the whole people, but also all the treasures of the house of Jehovah ... were given into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon; and moreover the temple itself was burned ... they filled Jerusalem with innocent blood ... they offered incense unto Baal, poured out drink-offerings unto other gods, set abominations in the house of Jehovah, built high places to Baal in the valley of Hinnom, delivered up their sons and daughters to Molech. All these signify the profanation of the holy things of the church. Such profanation is signified also by ‘Babylon.’ That the land, therefore ... might no longer be profaned by them, and also that Babylon might thus fully put on its representation, it was said to them by Jeremiah that they should surrender themselves voluntarily to the king of Babylon, and those who did not surrender ... but remained in the land, should die by the sword, famine, and pestilence.” Apocalypse Explained 1029.16

The Sons of Josiah Become Kings of Judah

King Josiah loved the Lord, but his commitment did not influence his sons or change the hearts and minds of the people of Judah. After Josiah died, his son Jehoahaz became king. He was like the earlier evil kings and the people soon returned to their selfish and ungodly ways.

With Josiah's death the Egyptians gained power over Judah. Three months after Jehoahaz took the throne, Pharaoh Necho took him prisoner and imposed a heavy tax. Then he named Jehoahaz's brother, Eliakim, king of Judah. Necho changed Eliakim's name to Jehoiakim, then took Jehoahaz back to Egypt where he died.

In spite of what might seem a friendly relationship between the Pharaoh and Jehoiakim, the tax still had to be paid. To raise the silver and gold needed, Jehoiakim collected it from the people. Like his brother, he chose to do evil.

Babylon Takes over Judah

While Jehoiakim was king, King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon made Judah its vassal. Jehoiakim rebelled against the Babylonians. However, because Judah had returned to idolatry and other sins, the Lord sent enemies against it. People from Chaldea, Syria, Moab and Ammon raided Judah, destroying its ability to defend itself. Therefore, the Babylonians took all the land from the boundaries of Egypt to the Euphrates river.

Babylonia Takes Judah into Captivity

After eleven years, Jehoiakim died and his son, Jehoiachin became king. His reign was very short. Within three months Nebuchadnezzar besieged Jerusalem. He took the king, his family and his household captive. The Babylonian king also took all of the treasures from the palace and the temple, including golden items made during Solomon's time that were still in the temple. Then Nebuchadnezzar took the people of Jerusalem and of Judah into captivity. He took everyone who was skilled and strong to Babylon along with King Jehoiachin and his household.

In doing this, Judah became dependent on Babylonia for everything. At the same time, Nebuchadnezzar strengthened his country by bringing in people to build and protect his cities.

Judah Rebels Against Nebuchadnezzar

After taking Jehoiachin to Babylon, Nebuchadnezzar made his uncle, whom he renamed Zedekiah, the ruler in Judah. Like his brothers and his nephew, Zedekiah was an evil leader. He did nothing to bring Judah back to the Lord. He had little power in Judah due to the Babylonian presence and because the officers of the court and most of his army had been taken to Babylon.

According to the prophet Jeremiah, Zedekiah was torn between doing what he suggested—serving Babylon—and what his advisors wanted—rebellion. He does not appear to have been a strong leader, but he chose to rebel against Babylon. In response, Nebuchadnezzar besieged Jerusalem until the people were so weakened by famine that they could no longer defend it.

Babylon broke through the walls of Jerusalem so the king and the men fled. The Babylonian army, which was camped around Jerusalem, scattered Zedekiah's army and then took him captive. The soldiers took Zedekiah to their king and he was judged for his rebellion. He was made to watch the death of his sons, and was then blinded.

The Final Destruction of Jerusalem

After Zedekiah was captured, Nebuzaradan, the captain of Nebuchadnezzar's guard, went to Jerusalem. He burned down the temple, the king's palace and the houses of other leaders in Jerusalem. He carried away most people who were left behind during Jehoiachin's captivity, and left only those who could farm the land.

Nebuzaradan took everything of value that was still in the temple to Babylon. Among these things were the huge bronze pillars and the bronze sea which he broke down so they could be carried away. He took the priests and servants who remained in the temple captive, along with a leader of the Judean army and other followers of Zedekiah who were hiding in Jerusalem. Then he brought them to Nebuchadnezzar who killed them for their allegiance to Zedekiah.

“Thus Judah was carried away from its own land.” (2 Kings 25:21)

After this final captivity, Nebuchadnezzar set up Gedeliah as governor over Judah. When some of the people who were left went to him, perhaps to question Babylonian control of the land, Gedeliah told them to serve the king of Babylon and all would be well with them. At least one of them, Ishmael, didn't like this advice so he took ten men with him and killed Gedeliah. Then people who remained in Judah and feared the Babylonians fled to Egypt.

The Destruction of Jerusalem

The End of a Church Is Near

With the call of Abraham in the Book of Genesis, the Lord prepared for a church to be established on earth. You might remember that the Lord made a special covenant with Abraham, telling him that his descendants would inhabit the Land of Canaan, the land which became known as Israel. The Israelitish church, named after Abraham's grandson, Israel (Jacob), was fully established when the Lord gave the Ten Commandments. Through the years the Lord renewed His covenant with the leaders of Israel, telling them that He could give them prosperity and happiness if they obeyed the Ten Commandments.

This lesson tells us of the people's rejection of that church. Despite all of the Lord's promises and warnings, the people could still not choose His way over their own selfish desires. You can imagine how terribly sad the Lord must have felt when the captivities of Israel and Judah had to take place. He feels this sadness anytime a person chooses hell over heaven.

The Lord works to establish a church in each one of us. Every time we learn from the Word we have the opportunity to make those ideas part of our lives, or to reject them. The Lord does not force us, as He did not actually force the Israelites. He did provide good and bad consequences to help them make good choices, but this was not enough to turn them away from evil.

We too, suffer good and bad consequences depending on our choices, although they are not always as obvious as those of the Israelites. Ultimately, our choices will determine our eternal home in either heaven or hell. While people are growing up, the adults their lives impose consequences for disobedient and unsafe behavior. Children and adolescents can not yet choose heaven or hell, but they can begin to make decisions that lay foundations for good choices that will later lead them to heaven. The Israelites could have chosen to remain faithful to the Lord and remain in the land promised to Abraham—a beautiful, fruitful land that represented heaven.

Preservation and Preparation

2 Kings 23:29-37; 24:1-20; 25:1-11

Whenever a church came to an end, the Lord raised up a new church. Before the old church died, He preserved its truths and prepared the world to accept the church that was to come.

When Israel was captive in Assyria, the people mixed with the Assyrian culture and their religion was lost. This did not happen with Judah in Babylonia. The stories of the Prophets tell us how the culture and religion of Judah were preserved in Babylonia and to some degree in Judah as well. This allowed the Old Testament to be preserved.

1. What happened in this story that would provide for the Old Testament to be preserved?

During the Babylonian captivity, the prophet Jeremiah sent a letter to the people who were carried away to Babylon. Find this letter in Jeremiah 29:4-14. Read it, and then answer the questions below.

2. What did the Lord tell the captive Jews to do?

3. What would happen if they did as the Lord commanded?

4. How might the Jews' obedience to the Lord help preserve His Word?

5. How might the Jews' obedience to the Lord prepare the way for a new church?

Seventy years after capturing Judah, Babylonia was invaded by the Persians. The Persians let the Jews return to Judah, to worship their God. They even helped them to rebuild the temple.

6. How might this have helped preserve the Old Testament?

7. How might this have helped prepare the people for a new church?

8. What do you think the new church will be called? Why?
